Sealed Insulating Glass Units

With ever-rising energy costs and impending government legislation, sealed insulated glass units are becoming more and more essential to any building. By trapping a layer of dry air between two glass panels, thermal resistance is naturally increased and heating and cooling costs reduced.

Condensation Eliminated

The tremendous insulating properties of dehydrated air in the SIGUs ensure the inner pane is at virtually the same temperature as the room, thus largely eliminating condensation.

Reduced Noise Levels

Generally, SIGUs offer approximately 20-30% improvement in sound control over a single glazed window, dependant on glass selection.

How glass can provide solar control

Solar control can be achieved in a number of ways, including body-tinted glass, coated glass, laminated glass with tinted inter-layers and insulating glass units (IGUs).
